

Today's Advent Devotional is provided by Dale L. Madyun-Baskerville

Trusting God to See Me Through

There have been many times that I have entered into a season, a race, a battle and have prayed for this outcome or that outcome. What I failed to do was pray to be humble if I lost that race or battle and asked for the wisdom, discernment and grace during that season, to trust God's plan and have faith in what God is doing in the background, the battles God is engaging for me.

I am thankful, even filled with joy, this morning for unanswered prayers!! I look back now and see where God protected me from harm's way. I don't want to "win" in instant races. I want to run with endurance the race marked out for me, fixing my eyes on Jesus!

How do you keep your endurance in the race of life, how do you let yourself feel and trust God's presence and experience God's repeating joy?